

SFHPT39

Enable the client to determine their therapeutic focus in humanistic therapy

Overview

This standard is about working collaboratively with the client within a relational framework to support them in determining their therapeutic direction. Humanistic therapists place a strong emphasis on the client's right to self-determination. Humanistic practice does not insist that the client works towards goals in a structured way. Therapists facilitate the emergence of therapeutic aims from the client's current experience in the here-and-now. This standard includes working with a client's feelings of a lack of direction or their preference not to have goals, yet to remain within the emerging process.

This standard describes therapeutic practice adopted successfully in mental health and wellbeing interventions for adults, based on the philosophical tenets of the humanistic tradition and incorporating a range of approaches from a humanistic value base (see reference in the additional information section on page 5). To apply this standard, practitioners also need to take account of the multiple problems and complex co-morbidities that individual clients may bring to therapy.

Users of this standard will need to ensure that they are receiving supervision and that their practice reflects up to date information and policies. This standard should be understood in the context of the Digest of National Occupational Standards for Psychological Therapies.

SFHPT39

Enable the client to determine their therapeutic focus in humanistic therapy

Performance criteria

You must be able to:

- P1 understand the ways in which the client views their main presenting concerns by:
 - P1.1 empathically attuning to everything the client brings
 - P1.2 understanding the significance of events and experiences as perceived by the client and how these might be contributing to current difficulties
 - P1.3 agreeing and sharing a case conceptualisation with the client
- P2 explore and allow a therapeutic focus to emerge with the client in the early stages of therapy and enable the client to evolve their focus during the course of therapy
- P3 allow the client's direction for therapy to take precedence over any that the you may prefer as therapist
- P4 collaborate with the client to clarify their primary intentions for therapy
- P5 balance the identification of therapeutic focus with the maintenance of a fluid, responsive therapeutic process
- P6 tolerate your and the client's uncertainty about therapeutic aims
- P7 enable the client to see their direction more fully by checking with the client as straightforwardly as possible your understanding of who they are and what they are bringing
- P8 maintain consistency with the therapeutic approach being offered

SFHPT39

Enable the client to determine their therapeutic focus in humanistic therapy

Knowledge and understanding

You need to know and understand:

Case Conceptualisation

- K1 methods of developing a case conceptualisation

Conditions for therapeutic change

You need to know and understand:

- K2 the rationale for responding empathically to the client and being warm, open, non-judgmental, genuine and transparent
- K3 how to employ the specific methodology, key concepts and relevant components of the model being used
- K4 how to maintain therapeutic conditions
- K5 psychological conditions that make change more likely

Relational processes in the immediate therapeutic relationship

You need to know and understand:

- K6 the mechanism and nature of shared meanings co-constructed by therapist and client
- K7 how the client's explicit, manifest communications may contain an implicit, latent meaning
- K8 the ways in which aspects of past events can be re-experienced in the present

The actualising tendency and process

You need to know and understand:

- K9 the role of actualisation in human growth and health
- K10 the ways in which internal processes out of the client's awareness can undermine, distort or block the actualising tendency
- K11 how the actualising tendency is expressed in the practice of humanistic therapy
- K12 the concept of symptoms as a signal for integrating experience and growth
- K13 the concept of symptoms as indicators of the actualisation process

Mental health and wellbeing

You need to know and understand:

- K14 the range and severity of mental health difficulties and their presentation
- K15 the factors associated with the emergence, development and maintenance of mental health difficulties
- K16 humanistic models of mental distress
- K17 the ways in which mental health difficulties can impact on personal and

SFHPT39

Enable the client to determine their therapeutic focus in humanistic therapy

interpersonal functioning

K18 models of a fully functioning individual

Human growth and development and the origins of psychological difficulties

You need to know and understand:

K19 models of change, health and wellbeing

K20 the impact of conflicts within the individual

K21 the impact of social context on psychological growth and development

K22 the role that emotional experiencing has in an individual's awareness of how an action contributes to growth

K23 the role of relationship in the development of self-experience

K24 the mechanisms and effects of internal processes out of the client's awareness in the development of self-experience

K25 the role of internal processes out of the client's awareness in difficulties in self-experience

K26 how thinking, feeling and behaviour are determined by an individual's subjective reality

K27 the impact on psychological development of empathic attunement and acceptance and the extent of its absence during the formative years

K28 the mechanism and effects of internalisation of the values, beliefs and attitudes of others

K29 the development and benefits of the capacity to reflect on inner processes and experiences

K30 the development of the capacity to balance inner and outer realities

K31 the multiple perspectives from which human experience can be viewed

Principles of humanistic therapy

You need to know and understand:

K32 philosophy and principles that inform humanistic therapy

K33 humanistic theories of therapeutic process

K34 approaches to psychological therapy that have grown out of the humanistic psychology movement

K35 experiential methods of learning

K36 non-humanistic approaches that influence humanistic therapy

SFHPT39

Enable the client to determine their therapeutic focus in humanistic therapy

Additional Information

External links

This standard is derived from research reported in Roth A D, Hill A and Pilling S (2009) The competences required to deliver effective Humanistic Psychological Therapies. Centre for Outcomes Research & Effectiveness (CORE) University College London.

This standard has indicative links with the following dimension within the NHS Knowledge and Skills Framework (October 2004):

Dimension: To be confirmed

Planned Review Date: 2014

SFHPT39

Enable the client to determine their therapeutic focus in humanistic therapy

Developed by Skills for Health

Version number 1

Date approved June 2010

Indicative review date June 2012

Validity Current

Status Original

Originating organisation Skills for Health

Original URN PT39

Relevant occupations Health, Public Services and Care; Health and Social Care; Health Professionals; Healthcare and Related Personal Services

Suite Psychological Therapies

Key words Humanistic, therapy, mental health, psychological therapy, psychotherapy, counselling, therapeutic, collaboration, self-determination.