Support victims, survivors and witnesses who have suffered bereavement

Overview

This standard is about supporting victims, survivors and witnesses who are experiencing the traumatic grief associated with bereavement through crime, caused by road death, murder, manslaughter or culpable homicide. It involves providing individuals with initial support to ensure that their immediate needs are met, including giving accurate information about the practical and criminal justice procedures that follow death, and where appropriate the stages that these procedures have reached.

It includes talking with individuals about the bereavement, and how it has affected them, and considering what might enable them to manage their experience. It also involves assessing with individuals the further support that they or their family may need to manage the effects of their experience. The effects may be psychological, physiological or social, with impacts on personal security and safety.

The term 'support' might include the provision of information, practical assistance, counselling and emotional therapy, safety and protection, health care, and help with media attention.

There are two elements

- 1 Provide initial support to victims, survivors and witnesses who have suffered bereavement
- 2 Provide further support to victims, survivors and witnesses who have suffered bereavement

Target Group

This standard is applicable to those who provide support and other services to victims, survivors and witnesses. Work with bereaved individuals is a specialist role undertaken by those with considerable experience of working with individuals affected by crime.
